ABSTRACT

This statistical account is based on 1975 library annual report data. Summary tables list data on services, receipts, and expenditures for cooperating county library systems, city libraries, and the state library. Lists of communities served within each county and of each county's taxable property values follow. Directories of college and university libraries, special libraries, U.S. depository libraries, library personnel, public library trustees, and members of the Oregon State Advisory Council and Oregon Library Association Executive Board are included. # PREFACE

A statewide increase of 21% in public library expenditures and 11% in circulation is revealed in the 1975 statistics, compared to 16% and 17% gains for these in FY 1974.

Baker County led again with 12.6 circulation per capita and $7.44 in expenditures per capita. Grant County took second place this year in circulation per capita with 11.2 and Josephine third with 10.8. Multnomah County was again in second place in expenditures per capita with $6.19 and Jackson third with $7.12. The 1974 Center for Population Research and Census report was used as the basis of these figures.

Circulation per capita statewide increased from 4.7 to 5.2 and in the area served from 5.9 to 6.4. Expenditures per capita statewide went from $3.60 to $4.29 and from $4.46 to $5.30 for the area served.

Thirty-two out of 36 counties reported a circulation gain, an unusual record for the past ten years.

Public support received by Oregon public libraries from city, county, and other fund sources (federal grants, federal Revenue Sharing funds, Emergency Employment Act funds, Comprehensive Employment and Training Act funds) dropped from a 17% increase last year to an 8% increase in 1975. This was mainly due to Revenue Sharing funds being continued and only 5 LSCA grants being granted to public libraries in 1975.

In the 1975 Directory total operating receipts will show a lower figure than total operating expenditures for Albany, Joseph, Mt. Angel, Newport, North Bend, Sheridan, Vale, Gilliam County Library (Condon), Jackson County Library (Medford), and Umatilla County Library (Pendleton). This was due to deletion from total operating receipts of all 1973 and 1974 LSCA grants reported on 1975 statistical reports. The State Library is required by law to report grants to public libraries as receipts in the year in which they are granted.

Oregon's population without public library service remained at 19%, or 432,251 people.

Library Services and Construction Act Title I grants received by 4, LSCA Title III grants received by 1, Emergency Employment Act funds received by 1, Federal Revenue Sharing Act funds received by 31, and Comprehensive Employment and Training Act funds received by 6 public libraries are footnoted in "Other Funds" columns of the statistics.

Bookmobile and station circulation are included in the figure designated "Extension Service" under counties that have such services.

The 1975 Directory includes 187 public libraries, including branches.

The new photo-ready format used this year became necessary due to rising typesetting costs involved in producing a printed publication.

Sincere thanks to all Oregon librarians, trustees, and public officials for their cooperative efforts in getting the data to the State Library for publication and distribution.

ELOISE EBERT
State Librarian

ABSTRACT

A three-part, 50 minute, library orientation program was designed for freshmen at Mercer County (New Jersey) Community College. The first unit was a 20 minute tour and demonstration of library equipment. The second unit introduced students to the card catalog and the subject organization of books. In the third unit, students learned how to use periodical indexes to locate specific information. A rationale, a list of objectives, specific learning activities, and a posttest were developed for each unit. Learning activities provided a choice of individualized materials--print, visual, audio, or a combination. Librarians, counselors, English teachers, and students evaluated the program, found it successful, and made recommendations for its further use and improvement. (LS)

ABSTRACT

Three units of individualized library orientation programs for the entering students are described. The first unit deals with a general library tour. The second unit is on the use of the card catalog, and the third unit explains how to use various periodical indexes.

A simple test is included in each unit to check whether or not each student understood the unit. An evaluation of the program is also included.

INTRODUCTION

Mercer County Community College is a two-year publicly supported coeducational institution, sponsored by the people of Mercer County, New Jersey, through their Board of Chosen Freeholders. The college was established in 1967 to provide equal educational opportunity for all Mercer County residents by offering them at least two years of study beyond high school. Programs are designed to accommodate the general interests and occupational needs of residents who want to continue or resume their education at the college level.[1]

The library in Mercer County Community College is as distinctive as the college which it serves. The service and operation of the library are determined by the extent and nature of the curriculum, the size of the faculty, staff, and student body, the methods of instruction, the various needs of the college community; and finally, the amount of financial support, including the size of the staff and adequacy of the physical facilities, etc.

In carrying out its responsibility in the academic program effectively, the library performs many activities:

1. It selects and acquires library materials.
2. It prepares these materials for the use of students, faculty, and others who require them.
3. It circulates materials.

---

[1]Mercer County Community College, Catalog 1973-75, (Trenton, N.J.: MCCC College Publications & Information Services Office, 1973), p. 2.

4. It gives reference services.

5. It gives instruction in the use of the library.

6. It interpretes library services to the administration, faculty, students, and community.

7. It supplements and continues classroom instruction.

8. It provides adequate and comfortable physical facilities for study.

9. Finally, it administers the total library operations, including budget, the organization and supervision of various library activities, the maintenance of the building and equipment, and the public relations activities.

Among these activities, giving instruction in the use of the library is one of the most important activities for new students, because mastery of library skills is a real necessity for the student who wishes to achieve above-average results quickly and efficiently in his course work at MCCC.

Therefore, the purpose of this paper is to analyze presently known library orientation methods and to design an experimental modular learning program. It will make students interested in the library as well as enable them to know what the library can do for them.

BACKGROUND AND SIGNIFICANCE

Library orientation is one of the many basic services of academic libraries. Various methods of library orientation and the importance of this service have been reported continuously in many library and educational publications since the beginning of academic libraries in this country.

One of the classic examples is Aldrich's excellent article about the library's function in teaching the use of the library to freshmen students.[2] Mews stated in his book entitled, Reader Instruction in College and Universities, that all freshmen students should be trained in the use of the library.[3]

Many outstanding scholars in the library field; such as, Maurice Tauber of Columbia University, Paul Dunkin of Rutgers University, and Virginia Jones of Atlanta University have voiced the need and the significance of library orientation in academic institutions.

Surely, emphasizing library orientation is nothing new, however, some of the methods are new; mainly, due to improved media, technology, and educational concepts. Frequently used media are 8 or 16 mm motion pictures, film cartridges, cassette tapes, videotapes, loop transmissions, printed programmed instruction with teaching machines or scrambled books, various kinds of slides, and sound filmstrips.

Some of the well-known orientation methods are the traditional lecture with or without media presentation, games, programmed instruction, and individualized instruction.

By utilizing available known multi-media methods, the Mercer County College Library staff has been constantly seeking innovative methods to motivate and instruct students in how to use the library since the beginning of the college. In the first few years, our library orientation was a part of the freshman English class. In recent years, a ten-minute videotape presentation was tried as a part of the total fifty minutes of college orientation.

Both methods were satisfactory in terms of attendance. The former method could not cover all of the entering students and the latter contributed very little toward their library skill because of its limited and short presentation.

Therefore, a new individualized instruction has been designed as an effective approach to the orientation problem. This instructional package was designed by the writer of this paper and implemented in the fall semester of 1974 during the college-wide orientation period.

The result was successful. Approximately 1700 entering students participated. The 1700 students and the five counselors, who were in charge of the college-wide orientation, liked the new program very much.

PROCEDURES

As part of the continuous effort to improve the existing library orientation methods, which were described elsewhere in this paper, concerned librarians, counselors, and English teachers met in the early part of May, 1974 and discussed various possible ways of improving library orientation. Five counselors, who were in charge of the college-wide orientation, two English teachers, who taught EG101, and three librarians were in attendance.

The consensus of the group was that students should be oriented within the library to allow them to examine the materials being discussed. The orientation should be done in one fifty minute period.

With these two points in mind, a three-unit individualized orientation program outline was completed just before the fall semester of 1974. It was implemented in September, 1974 as a part of orientation to the college.

In early September, 1974, there was another meeting concerning the new orientation program. It was then decided that the new individualized method would be tried. The library orientation would be conducted by assigned librarians as part of the freshman orientation.

The first unit deals with a general group tour of the library with extensive explanation about major facilities and demonstrations of various learning equipment. The tour requires about twenty minutes. The second unit is on the use of the card catalog. The last unit shows how to use periodical indexes. The remaining thirty minutes can be spent with these two units.

In early December, 1974, the new library orientation method was evaluated through the group nominal process. Thirty-two students were selected including four library technical assistant program students, who had been trained to serve as recorders. The group was devided into four units; each unit had one trained recorder.

Each unit meeting took place in separate rooms for two hours. The results of their opinions were tabulated.

THE RESULTS OF THE EVALUATION OF THE PROGRAM

After use in one semester, the orientation program was evaluated by the group of librarians, counselors, English teachers, and 32 students, who took the program. The following are the results of their evaluation of the program.

1. A twenty-minute tour of the library is regarded as a very effective way of introducing the library in general.
2. Since each student learns at different speeds and in different ways, the individualized approach of units 2 and 3 following the group tour is excellent.
3. Should this orientation presentation become a part of OC 101, all entering students are required to take it.
4. A maximum of 25 students can be taken on an effective group tour. Therefore, when a group of 26 or more has to be instructed, the lecture method must be used.
5. Reading materials from other sources should be defined or briefed. The materials should be explained to the readers.
5. The tour and individualized approach to library orientation seems very effective and promising. Students can be oriented in a meaningful way within the library at their own pace. After completing the program, students claim that they leave the library with a new sense of confidence in their ability to use it.

RECOMMENDATIONS

The following recommendations were made to the Dean of Students, The Chair person of the English Department, and the Chair person of Library Services.

1. A fifty-minute library orientation should be included permanently in college-wide Freshmen orientation.
2. Library orientation classes should take no more than 25 students.
3. English instructors should be encouraged to give their own in-depth lecture about the use of the library on their own schedules.
4. Individualized instructional methods with tours should be adopted in teaching all future library orientation classes.
5. Continuing evaluation of this method and explaining new methods of library orientation should be encouraged.
